Introduction

Gonds is essentially a primitive tribal community that is involved in hunting and food gathering, pastoral occupations, agriculture, martial assignments, basic trade and commerce, herbal medicine, etc. At the same time, they have perpetuated a unique tribal culture and language affiliation depending on the geographical regions. This unique speciality merits a better exposure and analysis to effect satisfactory assimilation into the social mainstream.

The first kingdom of Kerala, which is known in the history of kerala as the Chera Empire, was constituted as a confederation of seven branches of the Chera race. In the 3rd century BC, it was founded by the predecessors of the Kurumar/Kurumbar tribe of Wayanadu region. They represent the food gatherers of the preagriculture stage. Dr B R Ambedkar is of the view that the founders of the Chera kingdom were a sub-division of the Nagas, who traveled southwards from the North-West region of Asia and in a later stage were called Gonds, the founders of Gondwana Empire in the Deccan region. It should be remembered that the Deccan region was very much habitable for both the food gatherers and the settled agriculturists. Later, a branch of them moved to peninsular India and a group of them settled in the hill ranges and valleys of the Western Ghats in the Arabian Gopinathan: Vanyajati: July seashore (Dr R 2011:11).

According to the 2001 census, Gonds, the major tribe of the country, has been notified as a scheduled tribe in the states of Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Chattisgarh, Gujarat, Jharkhand, Karnataka, Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra, Odisha, Uttar Pradesh, Uttaranchal and West Bengal having a total population of 1,13,44,629 as per the 2001 census. They are concentrated in the central region, popularly known Gondwana, which includes the Satpuda Plateau, a portion of the Nagpur plain area and the Narmada Valley and are believed to belong to the Dravidian stock. This tribe has a share of 13.45 per cent of the total scheduled tribe population of India. Madhya Pradesh has reported the highest population of Gonds (43,57,918) constituting 38.41 per cent of the total Gonds population, followed by Chattisgarh 32.58%, showing (36,96,021)Maharashtra (15,54,894) depicting 13.7%, Odisha (7,82,347) revealing 6.89%, Uttar Pradesh (4,43,457) having 3.9%, Andhra Pradesh (2,54,856) revealing 2.25%, Karnataka (1,36,700) showing 1.2%, Jharkhand (52,614) having 0.46%, Bihar (51,792) with 0.45%, West Bengal (9,826) having 0.08%, Gujarat (2,152) showing 0.01% and Uttaranchal (2,052) having 0.01%. So far considering the percentage of the Gonds the total scheduled tribes population to population of the state, Madhya Pradesh shows the highest percentage (43.69%), followed by Maharashtra (19.47%), Odisha (9.97%). Karnataka (6.47%), Andhra Pradesh (5.04%) and Bihar (1.57%). However, as per the 2001 census, when the percentage of Gonds population to the population of total scheduled tribes of a state is concerned, Uttar Pradesh shows the highest percentage (80.42%), followed by Chhattisgarh (55.85%), Madhya Pradesh (35.62%), Maharashtra (18.12%), Odisha (9.6%), Bihar (6.82%), Andhra Pradesh (5.07%), Karnataka (3.95%), Uttarakhand (0.79%), Jharkhand (0.74%), West Bengal (0.22%) and Gujarat (0.02%).

The Gonds generally speak the Gondi dialect. Gondi is referred to both the mother tongue and a member of the Dravidian family (Central and Southern Dravidian Group). According to the 1991 census, Gondi language speakers were 21,24,852. This census figure includes Dorli, Ganda, Maria and Muria in Andhra Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra and Orissa. Gondi is one of the non-scheduled languages spoken in India mainly in its central part, that is, in Madhya Pradesh and in the adjoining states of Andhra Pradesh and Maharashtra (Jayant Kumar Banthia:2004:76).

In Bidar, Davanagere and Bangalore districts of Karnataka, India, Gondi (commonly referred to as Koitor) is spoken by approximately 1262 nomadic Rajgonds or Koitor as they call themselves. The dialect of the Gonds settled in Bidar and Uttara Kannada districts is the local Kannada dialect. Although it is here written in the Kannada script, one can clearly see that the Gondi language is very distinct from Kannada. An interesting feature of this variety of Gondi is the high level of borrowing from the neighbouring Indo-Aryan languages, particularly from Hindi and Marathi.

Early studies

So far, in India, the studies undertaken regarding the Rajgonds are innumerable. Among them are Bhoomia Gonds of Eastern Mandla (1960) by Puch, Gonds of Central Indian Highlands (1984) by B H Mehta, Customary Laws among Gonds of MP (1985) by M L Patel, Among the Gonds of Adilabad by Sethu Madhav Rao Pagadi, The Rajgonds of Adilabad (1948) by Furer Haimendorf Von, Castes and Tribes of H E H Nizam's Dominions (1989) by Siraj Ul Hassan, Gond Samskriti by Jamir Ulla Sharif, Gond Tribes in Bidar District: A Sociological Study (1994) by K M Metry, The Scheduled Tribes (1994) by K S Singh, Rajgond (2008) by K M Metry and Sudarshan Sedmaki, The Scheduled Tribes in Transition: A Sociological Study of Gonds (2008) by Dr B B Kalgi, and so on. These studies give valuable information about these tribes. Along with these, Man in India, Anthropological Study of India, and Census records also carry important results of studies on Gonds. Gondavana Darshan, a monthly magazine about the Gonds, is being published from Rajnandgaon, Chhattisgarh.

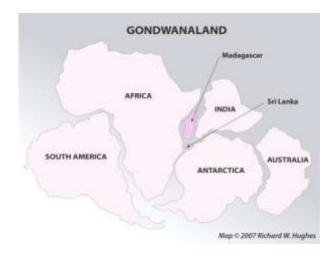

Gonds are a major Scheduled Tribe in India spread over 15 states. In Karnataka, the Gond tribal community with synonymous names like Naikpod and Rajgond inhabit predominantly in Bidar, Gulbarga and Uttara Kannada districts. In Karnataka, Naikpod, a synonymous name for Gond, is not prevalent. The distribution of Gonds with different synonymous names is very interesting to know, which reveals their spatial distribution. Initially, they were nomads and settled in Karnataka by involving in multiple activities. economic Gonds speak the "Gondi"dialect belonging to the Dravidian family. Now, they speak other Indian languages like Hindi, Kannada, Marathi and Telugu. They are non-vegetarians and their staple food is jowar and ragi. They believe that they are the descendents of the cultural hero Pahandi Kupar Lingo and Jangubai. The legends trace their identity to the Hindu epic story "Mahabharatha". Gonds have a well-developed social structure in Karnataka. To avoid incest in relationships, they have four septs known as Chardey, Panchdey, Sadey and Satadey. Their family structure is both nuclear and extended type of family structure. Gonds are endogamous and they follow maternal cross-cousin marriages and uncle-niece marriages. They are rigid followers of lifecycle rituals such as purity and pollution from birth to death.

Name: The name Gond, as mentioned by Hislop, 'seems to be a form of Gund, Kond or Kund.'

These three meanings most probably link to the Telugu equivalent for a 'mountain', originated from kondawallu or hill people. They must have borne this name for many ages, for it was mentioned by Ptolemy, the popular geographer (A.D.150), under the name 'Gondaloi'. As aptly pointed out by an earlier ethnographer, Cunningham, 'the term "Gond" is derived from Goud and it later became Gond'. Recently, V S Dhurve mentioned that the term Gond is composed of two words: Go and And. Gomeans earth and And means child, which together mean 'earth child' or the 'children of the soil'. Regarding the social link between the Gonds and other synonymous names prevailing in other states of India, S S Shashi has aptly remarked that "In Rajasthan, at places the Shepherds are also called Gujar; some include the Gonds among the Shepherd society. The Gonds are Rajputs but of Scheduled Tribes. They generally reside in Bidar, Gulbarga, Raichur districts. In fact, those found in Andhra Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra and Karnataka is a wing of Kurubasociety. It is said Bamgonda, a Kuruba (Gond) assisted in building the historic fort of Bidar. Even today names like Khand Gonda, Bir Gonda, Jat Gonda, Hul Gonda, Mal Gonda, Chan Gonda, Rai Gonda, Tulaj Gonda, Shiv Gonda, Shan Gonda and other Gondas are found. Many of their habits and customs are similar to Kurubas." (Shashi, S S: 1978:60-61)

The Gonds have lent their name to Gondwana, a historical region which gained prominence during the medieval period. The Gondwanal and contains five continents of the world, which are shown in the map.

In India, the Gonds are concentrated in the Central Region, popularly known as Gondwana, which includes the Satpuda Plateau, a portion of the Nagpur plains area and the Narmada valley, and are believed to belong to the Dravidian stock. In Karnataka, the Gonds are the second largest Scheduled Tribe, found in majority in Bidar, Gulbarga, Uttara Kannada and Bangalore urban districts. Territorially, the Uttara Kannada and Bangalore, the housing pattern of Gonds shows varying degrees of acculturation when compared with the Gonds houses of Bidar and Gulbarga districts. They prefer constructing huge farm houses surrounded by their own land with a classic touch of a royal kingdom. The

RELIGION AND BELIEF SYSTEM

At the all India level, according to Gond belief system, regarding their origin, Furer-Haimendorf(1979) states that "they had divine ancestors who were nurtured by the goddess Parvathi, but her consort Sri Shambhu Mahadeo had imprisoned them in a cave. These principal Gonds were ultimately liberated by the Gond cultural hero Pahandi Pari Kupar Lingo with the assistance of Jango Bai, a goddess well disposed to the Gonds and still regularly worshipped. When the primeval Gonds, referred to as the Parenda khara koya wasi pen, literally meaning the twelve threshing floors of the Gond gods, emerged from the cave, they appeared in four batches, and this division into four groups laid the foundation of the basic structure of the Gond society".

In Karnataka, the popular Gond folklore legend traces their origin to the Hindu epic Mahabharatha. This legend with religious beliefs cites the mythical link between the Gonds and the Pandav prince Bhimsen and the demon damsel Hidimba. It is said that Hidimba gave birth to five sons simultaneously and she was so disgusted at this unnatural event, she deserted infants to their fate. In this helpless condition, they were found by Mahadev, who took compassion on them and consigned them to the care of Parvati. She took charge of the infants, but nourished them on her left breast only. Even the divine nursing could not subdue their inborn tendencies towards cannibalism, for these monstrous infants began to imbibe, along with the milk the very life blood of Parvati's body which, in consequence, wasted day by day.

Mahadev alarmed her emancipation and divined its cause and confined the wretches in a mountain cave. From this they were rescued by Pedlingu, a renowned sage, who, henceforth, became their preceptor, related to them their past history and initiated them into the worship of their forefathers. The four elder brothers became the founders of the four important sections of Gonds as follows:

- a) Satdeo (worshipping of seven minor deities i.e., five Pandavas, their mother Kunti and their wife Draupadi)
- b) Sahadeo (worshipping of six minor deities i.e., five Pandavas and their wife Draupadi)
- c) Pachdeo (worshipping of five minor deities i.e., five Pandavas)
- d) Chardeo (worshipping of four Pandavas, the youngest being dropped).

In Halumatha Purana, the origin of Gond is as follows:

Muddugond and Muddamma were the founders of the

Gond community. Adigond was the son of Muddugond. Adamma was the wife of Adigond and their sons were called as Amaragond, Shivagond, and Bettada Beerugond.

Gonds, Rajgonds worship the clan and family deities, as also Persa Pen, Jungubai and Lingodeo. According to 'Gondi Dharma Darshana,' the Gonds in Karnataka worship 12 deities, 750 clans and 2250 totems as their deities, Now-a-days their new goddesses like Mahakali, Mariyamma, and so on are included. The Gonds observe the festival of Dussehra with great pomp. The Gond priests who officiate at the rituals command respect by all Gonds people. The Pardhan or Patadis' participation in Gond religious ceremonies is essential. Drinking and dancing are important aspects of their festivities. On the occasions of festivals like Deepavali, Holi and during Gond Jatras or fairs, all Gond members of the region interact with the neighboring communities. A few nomadic Rajgonds in Belludi have embraced Christianity. We have also found socio-religious movements among the Gonds Rajgond in Bidar district for their synonymous names. A few intellectuals and social activists who belong to the Gond community lead these movements successfully.

TRANSITION: CONTINUITY AND CHANGE

Regarding the Gonds of India, Haimendorf (1982:14) has aptly remarked that "Among the tribal populations of India the Gonds stand out by their numbers, the vast expanse of their habitat, and their historical importance. The Gonds' main concentrations are the Satpura Plateau. Majority of Gonds have traditionally been described as Raj Gonds. The term Raj Gonds, which in the 1940s was still widely used, has now become almost obsolete, probably because of the political eclipse of the Gond rajas. There exists little accurate information on the early history of the Gonds, and it was not until Mughal times that the Gond states figured in contemporary chronicles. But the ruins of forts ascribed to Gond rajas suggest that in the past centuries the Raj Gonds did not live in isolation, typical of many other tribal communities but entertained manifold relations with other (1989:21)populations." M. Satyanarayana mentioned that, "The Gonds are amongst the most civilized and advanced aboriginal tribes of India. The prime habitat is confined in the Satpura plateau, Bastar, a portion of Nagpur plateau and the valley of river Narmada in Southern India. This part is the original habitat of the Gonds, although by now these have settled in other parts of Southern India. The land of Gonds is known as Gondwana. Histrocially speaking, they at one time formed a ruling class of the local parts of the country". C.S. Venkatachar states that "The Gonds may be pre-Dravidians of the South on whom the Dravidians have imposed their languages and due to some causes in the regions of South East Madras, there must have been a large scale displacement of the tribes into the interior of the Central regions."

The above statements regarding the historical transition of the Gonds of India narrate the differences between the Gonds and other tribal populations of Central and Southern regions of India. In Karnataka, the Government of India notified Gond tribal community as a Scheduled Tribe with synonyms like Naikpod and Rajgond. As mentioned earlier, the Gonds total population in Karnataka as per 2001 census is 1,36,700. The data collected by K.M. Metry (2008) among the Gonds of Karnataka reveals very interesting and curious related synonyms of the Gonds which are different from region to region with their unique spatial distribution. In Hyderabad-Karnataka region, particularly in Bidar, Gulbarga and Raichur Districts, the Gonds are referred to as Kuruba Gonds and Dhangar Gonds. In Uttara Kannada districts, the Gonds are referred to as Pattagara Gonds. Whereas in some parts of Bidar district, in Harihara taluk of Davangere district and in Bangalore (Urban) district, the Gonds are referred to as Rajgonds, who are nomads and experts in preparing and selling native medicines to cure chronic diseases. These Rajgonds, being nomads, migrated as disease healers from the central provinces of India to Southern India by following train routes.

In Karnataka, a tremendous transition took place among the Gonds while joining the faiths of dominant Hindu community movements during the 16th century. Most of the Gonds in North Karnataka region joined the Lingayat movement and converted as Lingayats, but as a community they maintained social distance with other Lingayats. During this period, many synonymous names were used by others to refer to the Gonds. These synonymous Lalagondaru, Koodu Vokkaliga. names are Panchamasali, Nonabaru, Helavaru, Kurubaru and Odeyaru. The Gonds accepted these names as they belong to their own group of people.

The Gonds speaking "Gondi" as their own dialect belong to the Dravidian family. Because of their migration and exposure to so many states in India, they also speak Hindi, Marathi and Telugu. The Gonds living in Karnataka adapted Kannada as their contact language and use Kannada script for writing and reading. The dressing pattern of the Gonds and Rajgonds differs. The Rajgonds being nomads are scantily dressed while Gonds being farmers and labourers wear and dress like other rural people. The headgear is the identity of the Gonds. The elder women usually avoid wearing a blouse. They wear only the saree but now-a-days changes have occurred in their dressing pattern among the younger people. The women wear many ornaments around the neck and to their fingers. Now, the women prefer wearing chains made of colourful beads. The Gonds are non-vegetarians and recently a few Gonds in Bidar and Uttara Kannada districts have become pure vegetarians. Their staple food was only jowar butnow-a-days they have included ragi besides jowar. Recently, changes in their food habits such as increase in use of mutton by non-vegetarians and vegetables by vegetarians are observed. Their belief system is around the divine powers of Pahandi Pari Kupar Lingo and Jangobai. Now-a-days the Rajgonds of Bidar, Davangere and Banglore worship Lord Bomagondeshwar as their cultural legendary hero. The younger generation of the Gonds, still believe in their tradition of oral literature and the adventurous deeds of their four folk brothers Satdeo. Sahadeo, Panchdeo and Chardeo. Recently the study observed that among the Gonds Rajgonds, there existed 750 clans and 2250 totemic symbols which guide their belief system. A few nomadic Rajgonds have embraced Buddhism and Christianity. Recently they, at the national level, participated in socioreligious movements in India. To develop their Gondi literature (Gondi sahitya), the Gonds successfully organised national workshops, seminar and at Kannada University campus, Hampi and another one at Muttooru in Adilabad district of Andhra Pradesh inMarch 2009.

Family, among the Gonds society, is a social unit with division of labour among the members of the family. It is true that the Gonds had many joint families, but now there is an increase in the nuclear type of families, because the boys wanted to establish separate houseafter marriage; however, to continue their occupation, the adult brothers with parents jointly participate in economic activities. The points of conflict and confrontation between the family members form a check on the negative freedom of youngsters in rural areas and also due to direct challenge to the authority of Gond tribal council decisions. The parental property is inherited equally by all sons, whereas the position of authority in the family goes to the eldest son. The women in Gond society take part in social, cultural and economic activities and have the authority to make decisions. Of late maternal cross-cousin marriages and uncleniece marriages are the preferential type of marriages among the Gonds. Now-a-days, child marriages are not practised by them and age of marriage for girls is between 18 and 21 years and for boys, it ranges from 25 to 27 years. The mode of acquiring mates among them is transiting from elopement to negotiation.

Now-a-days, the main form of marriage is monogamy and polyandrous system is not prevalent among them. Their lifecycle rituals have social link with clan and family deities. Rajgonds, being nomads, strictly observe the rigidity cult of purity and pollution while practicing life cycle rituals. Many changes have occurred in their traditional occupation that is, from selling of medicines to crafts and other plastic goods. Now-a-days, they have the knowledge of marketing skills and modernity in selling their goods. The educated Gonds who are living in urban areas are not practising 'social distance' with other Hindu communities. The Gond Panchayat still has the authority to maintain law and order in the community.

Nomadic Rajgond Tribes of India

Background

Long ago, the Gonds of central India organised themselves into small kingdoms. They have a glorious history of having built 52 forts and reigned over this land. Gond kings are called Rajgonds. As the heritage of the kings continued, those associated with the kith and kin of the rulers were identified as Rajgonds. Earlier, they used to live by hunting, animal rearing and farming. They did not forget their earlier occupations, even after they established kingdoms. They continued to practise their old tasks. These people were very intimate with the secrets of nature. They worshipped nature.

They had deep knowledge about the medicinal values of herbs in nature. Later they emerged as native doctors or Ayurvedic curers. They became Ayurvedic doctors to the kings and royal families of Gonds and were called Raj-Vaidyas (Vaidya-Doctor). When the kings lost their kingdom by the invasion of Muslims, these Raj-Vaidyas became obsolete. So they turned to common people for medicinal services. In the course of time these people were called Rajgonds.

Nomadic Rajgonds

The Rajgonds, who lost the patronage of their kings, were forced to migrate to different parts of India for livelihood. Later, they came and settled in the following areas: Phulenagar in Takkar Maidan in Maharastra, Hivarkhed, Kajaleshwar, Mrithujapur at Akola taluk in Amaravathi district, Malegaon and Upanagar of Dhuliya district, Shrirampur of Ahmednagar district, Vadala (Dadar) in Mumbai, Pachora Railway station of Jalagaon district, Vaishalinagar of Latur district, Shivajinagar in Pune, Kakandi of Vijayawada district, Kukatpalli and Anantapur in Andhra Pradesh, Sudhampuri, Bhopal and Ujjain of Khandva district in Madhya Pradesh, Coimbatore in Tamil Nadu, Ajmir in Rajasthan, Adipur of Kutch district, Kayan Mill and Ghodasa of Ahmedabad town, Katwad of Sabakantha district, Keshod of Junagadh district, Rajkot and Vadodara town in Gujarat, Bevas in UP and Delhi. In Karnataka, Halladakeri on the outskirts of Bidar, Belludi in Harihar taluk and Maruthi Sevanagar in Bangalore have given shelter to them. In India there are about 2000 families and a 10,000 population of nomadic Rajgonds.

In June-July 2011, a survey was conducted in Gujarat, Karnataka, and in partial Maharashtra. The survey details are as follows:

Nomadic Rajgonds of Karnataka migrated from Central India. They are spread all over India after the downfall of the Gonds kingship. After the introduction of trains, they started their movement on railway line. Upto the 19th century their movement depended on horses. After 1940 they moved towards Southern India and temporary settlements began nearby railway stations in urban areas. In Karnataka, writers and government officials have wrongly interpreted these people as Hakki Pikki tribe, but they do not belong to Hakki Pikki. They are settled at Maruti Seva Nagar in Bangalore, Rajgond Colony in Bidar and Belludi Village of Harihar taluk. The details of their settlements and population are as follows:

RAJGOND TRIBES OF KARNATAKA Survey:June, July 2011

	Total	367	1492	1485	2977

Those families that have settled on the outskirts of Bidar keep moving between Bidar and Hyderabad, Nizambad, Bongir, Adilabad, Udgir, Nanded, Chandrapur, Nagpur, Latur, Pune, Parali, Parabhani, Gulburga and so on for their business of Ayurvedic medicines. Rajgonds of Belludi in Harihar migrate to Chitradurga, Hoskote, Gangavati, Harapanahalli, Bellary, Davanagere, Chikkamagalore, Bijapur, Bagalkot, Dharwad, Mangalore, Hassan, Goa and so on and those of Maruthi Sevanagar in Bangalore migrate towards Kerala and Tamilnadu.

Generally the Rajgonds migrate along the paths of railway tracks. The reason is that they can easily transport their belongings along with the tents by railways and also it is convenient to use the water in the stations. It suits their economic conditions. They migrate along with their families and stay for months in villages for their business of Ayurvedic medicine.

Social structure of Rajgonds

The social structure of Rajgonds consists of septs or clans. The whole population of Rajgonds can be divided into four groups. They call these groups 'Devas'. They are 'Chardev' (those worshipping four deities), 'Panchadev' (those worshipping five deities), 'Sadev' (those worshipping six deities) and 'Satadev' (those worshipping seven deities). Devas have been identified as the original link for their population. At first there were twelve such Devas. Later, they were reduced to only four according to the book 'Gondi Dharma Darshana'.

Thus, there were four men in 'Chardev', five men in 'Pachadev', six men in 'Sadev' and seven in 'Satadev'. They were the aboriginal men perpetuated as deities. The men of this race are the Rajgonds, because even today they identify themselves, their relatives and kith and kin with their Devas and septs.

Kinship

Blood relations among them are very strong. In fact they forbid weddings among the families of same Devas. They marry only the members of different Devas. It is difficult to find the members of differing Devas in the same region. Sometimes they allow marriages among the members of same or different Devas provided the septs are different. Not all Rajgonds allow this because they strongly believe that members of the same Devas are brothers and sisters and only other different Devas are relatives. Hence they identify themselves with the sept name along with their name; for example, Shama Raiseedam, Vasant Jamakar, Shama Pusnake and so on. Here, Raiseedam, Jamakar and Pusnake are the names of their sept or clan.

Worshipping deities and rituals

The Rajgonds have their own rituals and cultural practices. According to 'Gondi Dharma Darshana', Rajgonds worshipped 12 deities, 750 clans and 2250 totems as their deities. Today, there is no worshipping of their totems on that large scale. They believe in animism. Nowadays they worship Gods such as Pherasapen (Mahadev), Baradev (Beerdev), Bheemalpen, Mahakali, Mariyamma and so on. Besides, Rajgonds celebrate festivals such as Shivarathri, Dasera, Holi and so on. The Raigonds of Bidar observe fast for Shivarathri, spending the whole night in singing devotional songs and Gondi dance. The next day they break the fast with a community lunch. They have great reverence for Shiva and worship him as Pherasapen.

Rajgonds of Harihar celebrate Dasera with great pomp. They spend the night in dancing. Both men and women participate in Gondi dance.

Economic organisation

The Rajgond nomadic tribes in Karnataka are economically very poor. They are not engaged in agriculture and rearing animals. So they do not have even an inch of land of their own. They are very innocent and do not know any kind of cheating. Thus they are forced to wander in search of their livelihood. Unless they bring transformation among their traditional Ayurvedic practice, rules in caste panchayat and their beliefs, it is hard for them to improve economically.

Ayurvedic medicinal herbs are the support for their life. They call the herbs 'Jadi-Booti'. It means the leaves, roots and stems of herbs that are used as medicine. They get the herbs (Jadi-Booti) from Vindhya, Satpuda, Narmada, Godavari river belts where the forest grows thickly. When they are not available, they buy Jadi-Booti from the local Ayurvedic shops, prepare medicines and sell them. Women and old people sell medicines in the locality in which they camp. As they sell on roadside they do not get the right price for it.

Nowadays Government Ayurvedic hospitals have been opened and hence the families depending on Ayurvedic business are dwindling. The new generations among them have taken to cleaning ears on road sides and winding wires to steering wheels of vehicles. The children have taken to collecting of plastic bags that are used and thrown. If this condition continues, in a few years the Ayurvedic knowledge among this tribe will be completely lost. It is necessary to think and make plans to retain their invaluable Ayurvedic knowledge.

Overview

After a continuous struggle, a semblance of establishment and identity has been found by the Rajgonds through their bases at Bidar, Bangalore and Harihar in Karnataka. But they are yet to stabilise at these bases, as they are still moving around distant places in search of their livelihood and green pastures. Being a nomadic tribe, they sustain their culture wherever they live.
