INTRODUCTION

The reform of the bureaucracy that rolled out into the National Agenda defined through regulation of the President of the Republic of Indonesia Number 81 year of 2010 about the Grand Design of the Bureaucratic Reform and the Regulation of the Minister of State for Administrative Reform and Bureaucratic Reform Number 20 year of 2010 concerning the year 2010-2015 Road Map about Bureaucratic Reform. Bureaucratic Reform has the main goal of realizing world-class governance characterized by effective, efficient, accountable, transparent governance, clean from the collusion, corruption and nepotism or clean government, so that the improvement of the performance of the Organization of the Government is achieved. The national agenda for the reform of the bureaucracy is to encourage all government organizations that still considered slow, wasteful, and ineffective, to be able to serve with the support of the Government apparatus which have adequate capability so that they are able to perform optimally, effectively and efficiently in the governance process. Efforts to change the paradigm are carried out, among others, through organizational restructuring, so that the size of the organization becomes the right size according to the needs of the implementation of organizational functions, changes and improvement of work mechanism procedures with the implementation of quality standards.

According to Meliana (2014) in her research says that the reform of the bureaucracy is the arena and vehicle for optimizing changes in the government administration which currently considered slow, convoluted, incompetent, and corrupt. Improving the governance through bureaucratic reform program has entered the second phase. One of the areas to the reforms which is important to be improved is the public services, especially in the era of the current era of regional autonomy that provides opportunities for regions to be innovative, creative, and to create the best model for achieving quality improvement for the community. The development of a strong bureaucracy is an important element to maintain the continuity of sustainable development. To that end, bureaucratic reform will be implemented throughout all ministries/institutions and then forwarded to local governments. Furthermore, in the preparation of planning and budgeting, a comprehensive performance-based budget system will be conducted. The reform is expected to bear positive results especially in the improvement of the quality of public services, the effectiveness and accountability of the activities of the ministries/institutions and corruption prevention.

Fundamentally, bureaucratic reform is expected to lead to changes in the body of the organization, and these changes must be able to be adapted by the entire apparatus. Moreover, the existence of the program quick wins that demands speed in influence, outcomes, and the impact of the bureaucratic reforms implemented. According to Rhenald Kasali (2007), there are 2 (two) types of changes in the organization, (1) operational changes, namely small changes that are partial and generally do not give such a broad impact on other units in the organization, (2) strategic change, which has a broad impact and requires coordination and supports of related units, or even entire organizational components. Putra, Djumlani and Paselle (2014) in their research said that bureaucratic reform in the civil service are implemented through competency-based Human Resources Management Systems in the staffing system is a paradigm that gives direction for empowering Human Resources-Civil Servants in order to manifest the Civil Servants who are professional, responsible, fair and fair, as mandated in the Act – Chapter 12 number 43 year of 1999.

In general, the assessment of the progress of changes the bureaucratic settings has not shown a satisfactory achievement. Various assessments from the survey of independent institutions provide strong evidence of the low public perception of the performance of the bureaucracy after regional autonomy. Stereotypes about corruption, collusion, and nepotism remain congenital defects that overshadow all local government activities in managing the machinery of the government.

Bureaucratic reform in the Coordinating Ministry for Politics, Law and Security experienced obstacles and constraints in the implementation of the policy, namely the process of transition from a bureaucratic reform system towards a system of post bureaucratic reforms that has not been fully completely because not all components of bureaucratic reform can be carried out by Kemenko Pol-

hukam, due to the limited human resources that are owned by Kemenko Polhukam and still not optimal public service given by Kemenko Polhukam.

According to Santoso (2012), the history of bureaucracy in Indonesia has a bad report, especially during the new order, which made the bureaucracy a political machine. As a result, people have to pay expensive fees. The uncertainties of time, costs, and who is responsible for are some empirical facts about the destruction of bureaucratic services. Moreover, bureaucracy services have become one of the main causes of the rise of Corruption, Collusion and Nepotism (KKN). Political officials who fill the Government bureaucracy are very dominant. This condition for quite a while awakened forming attitudes, behaviours, and opinions that political officials and officials of the bureaucrats could not be distinguished.

Zuhro (2010), says that the model professional and neutral bureaucracy characterized by bureaucratic arrangement that supports the widespread creation of spaces for public participation empowerment and increased community creativity. In other words, the bureaucratic model is competitive within and between its parts. There is the institution of autonomous participant empowerment outsourcing competitor the democratization of public initiative and the making of early warning to the public of professional public service standards transparent in terms of cost and time public accountability system of appointment based on merit, the expertise of the collective objective of supervision competition institutions in providing public services and politically neutral. Firman (2015) said that the poor quality of services and the freedom of information that had been held in the bureaucracy made some problems in achieving a good quality of service. Regulations concerning public services must be a reference that can be maximized by regulators when implemented. This makes the public service becomes a complicated, long and expensive. This also triggers abuse and corruption at various levels of government. Coupled with bureaucratic way of thinking which does not made public as the actor to be served.

Bureaucratic reform agenda also tends not to have a clear orientation in various bureaucratic problems especially in bureaucratic performance. Manting (2017) in his research found that bureaucratic reform is one of the right ways to build people's trust. Bureaucratic reform is an attempt the principal change in a system in which changes the structure, behaviour, and the existence or old habit. The scope of the bureaucratic reform is not only limited to the processes and procedures, but also related to changes in the level of structure and attitudes as well as behaviour.

The research approach used in this study was a qualitative approach, in which the research process is used based on theories that are relevant to the issues canvassed in order to find a solution in the problems. Research was conducted by qualitative analysis purely by studying and doing identify intrinsic against existing phenomena. Implementation of comprehensive operational standards procedures in West Jakarta Prisons Hall (Bapas) is the implementation of the duties and functions that are passed down in writing and detail so that each employee in the performance of his obligations as a state civil servant can work optimally and make real contributions to the creation of employees who optimal in the framework of good governance.

Wardana and Meiwanda (2017) said that the changes in the pattern of governance in Indonesia along with bureaucratic reform are needed because of the government situation continues to shift; the old system is certainly no longer suitable if applied in the current era of Indonesian government. Public interests and values are the focus in this article, attempt a bureaucratic revamp of the government of Indonesia towards the better prioritizing the interests of the community, as parties served requires a long process, bureaucratic reform does not only focus on government movement, all components of the society can also support this bureaucratic reform so that effective governance will be quickly achieved. This is supported by research conducted by Tanti, S Zauhar, and Rochmah (2017) that the change the paradigm of the government from a centralized approach to decentralization which is characterized by autonomous region policies brings a new nuance in the implementation of regional government. The change in the paradigm altogether characterizes changes in the volume or task burden of the regional government in accommodating all matters submitted which later will be accommodated in the organizational structure of the regional apparatus. Bureaucratic reform at both the central government and regional governments is a necessity in effort to realize “good public governance.” Other government service bureaucratic reforms, public confidence towards the government has decreased while dealing with licensing documents that seem convoluted. With the existence of the problems, the Pasuruan City Investment and Integrated Licensing Service have made bureaucratic reform by issuing a One Stop Integrated Service system. Cepiku and Mititelu (2010) in their research said that the implementation of the administrative reform, particularly bureaucratic reform did not always run smoothly, full of challenges faced require a very ripe, agenda having previously not prioritized and not clearly defined in terms of the implementation of an effective, though referring to a strong desire. For this reason, it is necessary to select and develop proper strategies in an effort to succeed bureaucratic reform of the bureaucracy to realize effective governance in local government, as Nuril (2018) said in Hanh Been Lee that the strategy is a variable that is used to change the administrative reform that includes the type, scope and pace of reform. Prasajo and Kurniawan (2008), said the strategy was necessary, because of weak agents of change, the internal structure of the institution is not intended for big changes as well as the scope and pace of reform should be compromised. To step into the implementation of administrative reform, two strategies are offered, namely the Comprehensive Strategy and incremental strategy. Comprehensive Strategy is a method or pattern used by a central managerial in controlling several areas of coverage such as personnel, budget and organization. In the implementation of these strategies, the necessary political support from regulators, while the legislature and political parties rarely provide adequate support. Ruler required political commitment, considering the entire planning administration reform will be carried out and must be made known to the rulers, so that the desired goals will be achieved. As a result of research in several areas, it was found that one of the factors supporting the success of the reform of the bureaucracy in the area is the commitment and political will the head area. Incremental strategy is an approach that viewed the Administration’s reforms gradually and as sequential chain, because reform is considered as a process. This approach gave priority to training that involves not only the staff of the Agency’s reform, but also people from other relevant agencies. Each strategy has advantages and limitations. The advantages of incremental strategy can build trust among agents of reform. While its limitations as his approach are way up (gradually), so it will need a much longer process. The advantages of comprehensive strategy, the changes will be thorough and takes a relatively shorter than incremental. The limitations require more attention from both the government and related agencies/institutions. Therefore, the time, the main issues of the strategy is influenced by the following conditions:

1. The draft administrative has reform scheme are obvious, including the alternative solutions.

2. Depending on the power of the Government, in seeking the political support, especially from the bureaucracy.

3. Implementation of the reform of the scheme should be communicated into or out of the organization. Requires that members and sub-groups of the Organization informed

4. Environmental change crucial reform can be effective.

5. The implementation of the scheme more moderate reforms.

Dror (2014) posited six cluster administration reform strategy more dip (concrete) on the question of the reform of the administration. Broadly speaking, donation is thought Dror in the strategy reform of Administration regarding the quality of Human Resources needs, the separation of the influence of political power against bureaucracy and a fundamental system change, namely by doing decentralized. Below are six thought reform strategies concerning Dror administration, namely: (1) Producing the efficiency of the Administration, can be measured from the value for money-saving aspect, for example through simplification of procedures, changes in procedures, reduction of the duplication process and the same approach in the Organization and methods; (2) Reducing practices that weaken the administrative reforms (such as: corruption, cronyism, favouritism and others); (3) changing the main component of the administrative system to generate ideal conditions, such as applying merit system employment, implement a program-based budget system, build data banks and so on; (4) Adjusting the administrative system to anticipate the effects of social changes due to modernization or war; (5) Dividing clearly between employees on the system of the administration of development in the political system, for example, break down the powers of the Government officials or bureaucrats at the senior level, so the more wayward in the political process; (6) Changing the relationship between the administrative system with all or part of the components of the society, for example through a strategy of decentralization, democratization and participation. Hanafie (2014) said that the Administration's reform strategy options above require a system of policy making that is of high quality. On the perspective of service and performance improvement of government bureaucracy, Effendi (2009), revealed that the reform strategy is defined as efforts to improve the quality of public service, accelerating the eradication of corruption, increased the performance of Human Resources management, staffing agencies based performance, remuneration and meritocracy, competency-based training, settlement of the status of honorary officers, daily power off and officers are not fixed as well as deregulation and debureaucratization. It turns out that in GDRB (Grand Design the reform of Bureaucracy) in Indonesia, seems that the implementation of the reform of the bureaucracy that proclaimed is not comprehensive, but rather, because through incremental stages, which includes four stages, namely (1) implementation, (2), (3) implementing the program, and (4) the method of implementation. At this stage, implementation of the reforms carried through three levels of implementation other than bureaucratic reform strategies expressed in GDRB, the following methods of the implementation of the reform of the bureaucracy is done with four ways: (1) Premetive; predicting the possibility of a bureaucratic practice that is considered inefficient, ineffective, cause lengthy process, CCN and other opportunities and anticipative steps; (2) Persuasive, performing various bureaucratic reform efforts such as through socialization, public campaign, internalization to build the status and individual commitment; (3) Preventive; preventing the possibility of a bureaucratic practice that is considered inefficient, ineffective, raises the long process, KKN opportunities, and open up more. Through a change in mind set, culture sets; (4) action/sanction, sanction or punishment such as apply for those who don't perform in the implementation of the reform of the bureaucracy. Patrisia (2017) in her research revealed that in carrying out the reform of the bureaucracy was not easy, the various obstacles encountered, certainly from either internal or external environment. In other words, the bureaucratic reform failure hampered indirectly because of low morale and motivation of SDM. In fact the issue of human resources (SDM) is also related to: (1) recruitment system, (2) placement (the right man in the right place), (3) the system of incentives; and (4) salary. The recruitment system still nuanced KKN will not produce human resources in accordance with the competencies and professional. Collusion and Nepotism led to the policy makers into a dilemma in deciding the ideal HR, because analysis of the position of the base will not be a consideration. The decisions taken, typically are political also the placement of someone in certain position. The basic consideration is taken not based on competence. The analysis of the position or performance, often are political to keep the interests of power management. Incentive systems and inadequate salaries contribute towards the course of the reform of the bureaucracy, because of incentives and salaries may motivate the bureaucracy in the exercise of his duties, so as to realize the performance well. With a high salary and incentives will give stimulus bureaucracy work well and expected corruption does not occur.

RESEARCH METHODS

The research method is qualitative. According to Creswell (2010), research is qualitative methods to explore and understand the meaning by a number of individuals or a group of people considered to be derived from social or humanitarian problems. The research was conducted in Ministry of Politics, Law and Security (Kemenko Polhukam). The data sources used in this research were primary data and secondary data. Primary data obtained from first through a structured interview to the respondents by using questionnaires. The respondent is an expert resource person selected based on considerations of expertise, practical experience, and stakeholders. The secondary data were obtained from various sources through the study of literature, institutional and other agencies, as well as references from the internet. This data is in the form of the results of the review of the literature, reports, documentation, archives, and others. Engineering data collection performed is observation, in-depth interviews, and conduct studies of the literature. The technique of determination of the respondent's done deliberately (purposive sampling) who are considered expert/experts. Expert interviewees in this study are: (1) the head of the Bureau of planning and organization; (2) the head of a law firm, Proceedings and Institutional Relations; (3) the General Bureau Chief; (4) Deputy Secretary 1; (5) the Deputy Secretary 2; (6) the Secretary Deputy 3; (7) the Secretary Deputy 4; (8) the Deputy Secretary 5; Deputy Secretary (9) 6; Deputy Secretary (10) 7; (11) the Inspectorate.

Processing techniques and data analysis conducted this research is using the CIPP model (context, input, process, product). This is beneficial for the CIPP model analyse issues strengths and weaknesses of a particular object that will be or is running so that gives you an idea to decision makers in planning a program to make it more directional, and reduce the potential for failure. The evaluation context is also expressed as the focus of the institutions identify opportunities and assess the needs formulated as a gap (discrepancy view) the condition of the real (realistic) and the expected condition (idealistic). Evaluation of input can be said to be an evaluation of the information provider to determine how the use of the resources available to achieve the objectives of the program. This evaluation consists of a personal analysis with regard to how the use of existing resources, an alternative strategy in the framework of the achievement of the goal of a program that is identifying and assessing incur a capability system, alternative strategies the program, procedures for the design, financing and implementation of the strategy of scheduling. The evaluation process includes the identification of problems of procedure on implementing incident activity. Product evaluation aims to measure, interpret, and evaluate programs.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

Coordinating Ministry of politics, law and security or commonly abbreviated Kemenko Polhukam is one of the coordinators of the Ministry which has the task of organizing a coordination, synchronization, and control of the Affairs of the Ministry in implementing the Government in the fields of politics, law and security. Each Ministry/Agency roles and tasks and related functions coordinated by Kemenko Polhukam. The condition as a logical consequence because the political, legal, and security is a field that has sliced or overlapping in the achievement of goals and objectives implemented by ministries/agencies. Kemenko Polhukam as government organizations must have the ability to respond to dynamic environmental conditions intelligently that naturally grow and develop. There is the fact that the dynamics of world politics or changes that occur in the present era of globalization has been a competition between Nations. These conditions are likely to lead to a scramble for influence that is quite tight, both on a regional and global level. These developments are caused the occurrence of changes in national and world public order situation with the emergence of issues of dissemination of universal values and acceleration. As the Ministry coordinator, Kemenko Polhukam also has the duty of helping to coordinate and synchronise the President in the formulation, implementation and assignment policies in the fields of politics, law and security. Kemenko Polhu-

kam has the strength and ability to move the ministries/agencies in implement policies of political, legal and security both generated neither by Kemenko Polhukam nor in order execution policy-related issues of politics, laws and security. The existence of Kemenko Polhukam as the Coordinator for politics, law and security is becoming increasingly important and valued benefits, because it can be recognised, trusted and respected by all parties. Kemenko Polhukam is not just part of the Government, but also a part of the whole society and aspects of life.

Strategic goals achieved significantly by Kemenko Polhukam was to measure of the achievement to ensure the achievement of business goals which have been formulated and reflects the influence brought about by the presence of the results (outcomes) of all program of Kemenko Polhukam. In order to achieve the objectives of the strategy the Polhukam Kemenko, then the strategic goals was arranged and the indicators for the next five years are: (1) the achievement of the effectiveness of synchronization and coordination of the planning, preparation, and implementation the policy fields of political, legal and security; (2) increasing the institutional capacity of Kemenko Polhukam in order to the coordination and synchronization of policy areas of political, law and security.

The Organization of the Government which is assessed is still sluggish and ineffective-efficient, making the base to tackle reform of the bureaucracy. The reform could be a radical change can be identified with the revolution or the change may be gradual. This depending on the object it will be reformed. If the damage and irregularities that happened has been very chronic reform should be done radically. But if irregularities occur is seen still then not needed radical reform. Development of reform practice and its renewal could create a bureaucratic reform was well underway. The reform of the bureaucracy that still can run if pioneered the organization doing some updates while implementing the existing regulations. Implementation of the reform of the bureaucracy on the environment Kemenko Polhukam post publication of presidential Regulation No. 81 year of 2010 about the Grand Design the reform derived from the data source to some of the interviews as an object of research and some documents related Kemenko Polhukam.

Furthermore, this bureaucratic reform leads to work more professional and accountable, especially in general bureau public which responsible for the public transparency. While based on the observation, data of public service that is transparent and effective. The public get excellent service in accordance with expectation i.e. quickly and easily. From observations in the field are still found, the ideal of service conditions are still difficult to be realized, because in reality there is still Kemenko on the Polhukam apparatus perform tasks/an other job, moonlighting outside his duty to increase income in order to meet the needs of the living. From the description-the description above, namely regarding quality service of Kemenko Polhukam apparatus can be seen from the aspect of spontaneity in dealing with the problems and serve the community, grace period length of a settlement of the problem and civility in granting the waitress as well as politeness and hospitality in providing services can be said to have not been as expected by users of the service, or still less so need to get special attention from leaders who are in Kemenko Polhukam.

Bureaucratic reform was implemented in order to realize good governance (good governance). The reform here is a process of renewal is done gradually and sustainably, thus excluding attempts and/or action that is both radical and revolutionary. To provide excellent service (efficient) and carry out effective supervision of depend on legislation that became the basis of the duties and authority of a bureaucracy. Of the legislation set out the system and procedure (systems and procedures) and the Ministry of supervision. Further based on the desired systems and procedures created the organizational structure necessary to set the levels and types of Office, duties and authorities as well as the number and qualifications of human resources (HR) required by pay attention to workload. Not only the number of human resources needs to be defined but also the quality and expertise of anything from human resources required is a factor that must be considered.

Improvements to the current apparatus service system should be a priority, because the Ministry apparatus are always needed by the community. Therefore, in conducting the activity and daily necessities had to be through licensing and Government Regulation. The Organization of the Government reforms needed so that services provided to the community in accordance with the needs and the development of the times. Kemenko Polhukam managed to formulate policies and regulations in favour of the bureaucratic change poured in the strategy reform of bureaucracy. There are some strategies that had already been implemented, namely: (1) increasing the means of facilities in offices to support the activities according to the needs; (2) supporting the organization's needs in the field of Human Resources; (3) the summons and serving unit/other sections related to the layout of the manuscript correspondence in Kemenko Polhukam; (4) the public Ministry against accommodating; (5) organizing the working mechanism; (6) regulating administrative accountability; (7) compiling the organization to match the duties of Kemenko Polhukam; (8) conduct evaluation activities performed against each of the offices; (9) drawing up of internal security technical policies; (10) conducting internal auditing against financial and performance through audits, evaluations, review, monitoring and other surveillance activities; and (11) compiled a report on the results of the activity.
